SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Ned Ray McWherter (1939-) was the fifty-third governor of Tennessee. The Governor Ned Ray McWherter Papers (1987-1995) represent an official record of those years. Totalling over 337 cubic feet or 674 filing boxes, the McWherter papers have been arranged into ten series: Boards and Commissions; Correspondence; Legal Office; Legislative Office; Personal Papers of the Governor; Photographs; Press Office; Scheduling; Speeches; and State Planning.

Boards and Commission files largely contain requests/applications for various types of certificates: Colonel; Award of Merit; Appreciation; Honorary Citizen; Years of Service; Centenarian; and Outstanding Achievement.

Correspondence comprises almost one half of the collection. The general correspondence covers a wide range of subjects reflecting the concerns of Tennesseans of this time period: requests by school children for informational materials on Tennessee; requests for Tennessee flags; requests for autographed photos of the governor; State opinion ballots regarding issues in state government; assistance in securing employment; criticism of the Career Ladder program in schools; opposition to the death penalty; requests for favorite recipes of the Governor; Medicaid program; requests for appreciation/congratulatory letters; protests of speeding tickets; requests for seeking personal sponsorship, endorsements of contributions; consumer complaints of travel scams; proposed land fill at Bells Bend; child support; and many other serious and not so serious concerns. The general correspondence is arranged by year and then within each year alphabetically by name. There is also an index (page nine) to certain selected names and subjects that appear prominently in the papers or that are of exceptional significance.

Within the subject division of the correspondence may be found several folders containing information of the efforts of the McWherter administration to achieve reform in Tennessee's educational system. As part of the strategy of becoming informed of the status of schools in Tennessee, McWherter and staff from the Department of Education made a number of community visits in 1990 to educate the communities on the needs of the 21st Century Classroom, emphasizing the growing role of the computer. The drive for education reform was part of a package that included an attempt to overhaul the tax system. Failure to achieve an income tax adoption forced Governor McWherter to rely on other sources for revenue.

During the first term of Ned McWherter several new prisons were either approved or completed to lessen overcrowding and to abide by federal mandate. Within the subject section of the correspondence series are letters from many of the inmates incarcerated in the Department of Corrections. Among these letters are some from probably Tennessee's most famous felon, James Earl Ray.

Another first term initiative was "Drug Free Tennessee." This was a concentrated attempt to educate the citizenry about the drug problem and to give direction on how this growing health problem might be controlled and, hopefully, eradicated. This issue is discussed extensively in the press office files, through speeches by Governor McWherter, and by the state planning office.

Within the legal office files may be found several lawsuits, including the Tennessee Small Schools System, et al v. N. R. McWherter, et al. This represented litigation by the small schools to gain a larger proportion of state funding in rural areas of the state.

Soon after Governor McWherter took office in 1987 he took his Cabinet on a series of visits across the state. This was known as "Listening to Tennessee." They met with people in every county of the state to hear about how state government was working. This was repeated in mid-1989, but with his Commissioners. The planning and execution of this program may be found within the "Index" under the same name.

The problem of the handling and disposal of solid waste was another concern in the first administration. The background and other related materials which led to the passage of the Solid Waste Management Act of 1991 may be located in the files of the legal office as well as in the files of the legislative office.

At one time Tennessee was one of six finalists which were competing for the site location of the proposed Superconductor Super Collider (SSC). Although Texas was ultimately chosen, Tennessee made a strong bid for the prize. Documents related to this are largely found in the files of the press office.

The files of the personal papers of the governor traces the efforts of the McWherter administration in the second term to detach Tennessee from the Federal Medicaid program and replace it with a state controlled system for the elderly and indigent. The end result was the establishment of TennCare. Letters, both pro and con, from the citizenry as well as doctors and hospital administrators may be found in this series as well as in the press office files.

The scheduling office was responsible in arranging public appearances for the governor. The governor's office received many requests from organizations as well as individuals asking that the governor make a public appearance at some event. Most invitations were declined because of a scheduling conflict. Correspondence relating to the invitations is among the scheduling files.

Governor McWherter made many public speeches during his eight years in office. These have been divided into "major" and "minor" categories. Major speeches such as the budget message or the State of the State are arranged separately from those considered minor, such as announcements, remarks, and statements.

Included in the register is an organizational chart for the executive department of the McWherter administration near the end of the second term. Accompanying the chart is a list of the personnel who held various positions in these offices.

The McWherter years, as reflected in the collection, may be summed up as follows: the first administration placed emphasis upon the young, with special attention to improving schools in Tennessee; the second administration concentrated on the needs of the elderly, particularly as it related to health care.
